Philadelphia, PA (October 19, 2015) – Kate Campbell, a partner with the environmental, energy and litigation firm of Manko, Gold, Katcher & Fox, LLP (“MGKF”) located just outside of Philadelphia, PA, will participate in a panel on “Environmental Enforcement Actions in Pennsylvania.” This is a three-city series kicking off on November 9 (Mechanicsburg, PA) and also running November 20 (Philadelphia) and November 23 (Pittsburgh). There will also be a live simulcast of the initial program on November 9. These programs are all sponsored by the Philadelphia Bar Institute and registration details can be found here. Three CLE credits are available, including one hour of ethics.

The last three decades have seen the emergence of environmental regulations as a major government activity. These programs will provide a thorough overview of the enforcement process and offer valuable and practical guidance for representing clients in civil and criminal government enforcement actions. Campbell will kick off the program focusing specifically on the civil enforcement process, including agency inspections, notice of violations, the use of self-audits, and litigating and resolving enforcement matters.

Regional counsel from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection will be on the panel to present their unique insights as well.

Kate Campbell is a litigation partner at the firm, where she focuses her practice on environmental, toxic tort and class action litigation, and Superfund and other enforcement matters. Since joining the firm in 2003, she has developed considerable experience in in litigating federal, state and private enforcement actions under an array of environmental statutes, in representing potentially responsible parties in cost recovery and contribution actions under CERCLA and state law, and in defending complex toxic tort claims for personal injury, wrongful death and medical monitoring.
