Philadelphia, PA (March 23, 2011) – Manko, Gold, Katcher & Fox, LLP (MGKF) was named to Top Workplaces 2011 by the Philadelphia Inquirer, Daily News and Philly.com and was the top-rated law firm in the survey. Top Workplaces 2011 is an extensive effort by the Inquirer, Philadelphia Daily News and Philly.com to uncover the best employers in the Philadelphia region—from the point of view of the employees themselves.

Managing Partner Robb Fox shared the firm's appreciation of this recognition. He said, "When we founded our firm, our goal was to make quality of life a priority. To be recognized by our employees in this way is a great honor." Since its inception in 1989, MGKF has cultivated a family-friendly culture and positive work life balance. He continued to explain their philosophy, "Our goal has always been to foster an environment focused on challenging and interesting work, client satisfaction, community service, and maintaining a dedicated and loyal employee base." In addition to receiving recognition as a Top Workplace 2011, MGKF was also recognized previously by the Delaware Valley Association for the Education of Young Children (DVAEYC) as a "Best Employer for Working Parents", particularly for its customized employment opportunities which allow employees to balance professional and family demands.

Another noted, "I feel that I have a second family where people genuinely care about me. It's very flexible and I know that I'm valued and trusted to do what is best for the company."
